Biggart patients get in the Christmas spirit

Patients and staff from Biggart Hospital have been getting ready for Christmas with a series of Christmas celebrations. Choirs from around South Ayrshire entertained the patients with music, Christmas carols and fun.

The pupils of St Ninian’s Primary School choir brought their own brand of festive cheer to entertain the patients in Drummond, Buchanan, McMillan and Anderson wards before their finale in the Anderson/McMillan day room.

Glenburn Primary School choir were in fine voice when they visited the Lindsay Ward. And the Ayrshire Boys Choir were on hand to sing for the patients in Anderson and McMillan wards.

The Ayrshire Council for Music entertained the patients of the Drummond Ward, while the Baptist Male Choir visited the Urquhart Ward.

The celebrations finished with a Christmas Service in the Ferguson Day Hospital.

Andrew Moore, Assistant Director of Nursing (Patient Focus Public Involvement) and Co-chair of the Biggart Initiative Committee, commented: “Being in hospital at this time of year can be difficult and we are delighted that the different groups came along to entertain the patients, visitors and staff. Our patients loved hearing their Christmas songs, and even joined in a few.”

ends

Photographs:

The pupils from St Ninian’s Primary School bring their own brand of festive cheer to the Biggart Hospital
Ayrshire Boys Choir entertain the patients with their Christmas carols

Date of release: Thursday 24 December 2009

For more information contact:

Miriam Porte
Communications Officer