Entrance closure at Ayrshire Central Hospital

Works starts on Monday 17 August to the south entrance/exit at Ayrshire Central Hospital (next to Eglinton Medical Practice). The work is expected to last three weeks and during this time the south entrance/exit will be closed to all traffic.

The entrance and road are being widened as part of preparations for the new £46 million new hospital building on the site, Woodland View.

Balfour Beatty and their sub-contractor WH Malcolm are carrying out this work to widen the entrance, change the corner at the WRVS shop and widen the road along to Woodland View. This will allow a Public Service Vehicle (PSV or Bus) to enter and leave the Ayrshire Central Hospital site safely.

Temporary signage will be in place to let patients, staff and visitors know that the south entrance is closed and that the North entrance (at the Horseshoe) should be used.

To help ease congestion at the North entrance, the Castlepark exit will remain open so that vehicles can leave from here.
